youre in a couple, or trouble, or just want to dress up with your bestie, you may be scouring the internet for last-minute Halloween couples costumes that will make both your non-couple and overly annoying couple friends jealous that they didnt do it first. Just because Selena Gomez and Benny Blanco have already shown off their Alice in Wonderland looks doesnt mean the Halloween couples costume contest has been won just yet. Whether youre into classic Halloween horror or cosplaying your favorite pop-culture moments or celebrity romances, weve rounded up some of the best couples costumes to help you win Halloween. Because whats the spooky-season holiday without your boo? Photo: Warner Bros/Courtesy Everett Collection A Halloween favorite: Who doesnt love a Beetlejuice and Lydia Deetz costume from beyond the grave is trending once again, making the already-beloved costume even more popular. So whether you and your partner want to dress in Beetlejuices famous striped suit and Lydias utterly alone all-black garb or in the pairs infamous red wedding looks a favorite option among film fans and engaged couples (like myself and my fianc) youll easily win Halloween dressed as this paranormal pair. Yes, just like former flames Bella Hadid and the Weeknd did that one time. Red Wedding Costume Set $83 $83 Beetlejuice Costume for Adults $60 $60 Photo: Universal/Courtesy Everett Collection Were officially weeks away from the long-awaited premiere of the Jon M. Chus Wicked. And unless youve been living under a rock, you know that for the last few months, the films stars, Cynthia Erivo and Ariana Grande (aka Elphaba and Glinda), have been on a world-wide fashionably pink and green press tour ahead of the Broadway adaptations big screen release on November 22. So whether you plan to go out all as the two witches, with green and glitter skin, or just feel like wearing contrasting green and pink ensembles accessorized with a witch hat and a tiara (believe me, people will get it), the wonderfully Wicked pair is an on-trend Halloween costume $45 $45 We all know it was the summer of Sabrina Carpenter. Lets be real, you were rocking out to Espresso whether you liked it or not. But the singer made sure that her fans didnt sleep the rest of her album which is full of gems like Taste (Me Too), which came with a killer music video featuring Wednesday star Jenny Ortega as her twisted other woman rival. little cute but also a little scary. Honygebia Blonde Wig with Bangs $37 $37 Nana Jacqueline Sasha Dress $390 $18 $18 Photo: 20thCentFox/Courtesy Everett Collection Calling all burger babes! If you and your bae are fans of Bobs Burgers, heres how to channel the shops duo faster than you can say Bobby, Bobby, Bobby. Throw on some jeans, grab a few white aprons and your favorite frying pan along with some frozen patties, and youre ready to serve up Bobs burger of the day. For some added flair, dont forget Bobs beloved chalkboard or Lindas thin cat-eye glasses. If you have kids, this is also a great family costume because who would Bob and Linda be without their three adorable children? Bob Belcher Waterproof Apron $15 $15 Linda Belcher Halloween Costume $25 $25 Photo: Shondaland/Abc Studios/Kobal/Shutterstock Its an election year. (Vote!) But thanks to Kerry Washington and Tony Goldwyns real-life campaigning, weve been having serious Scandal nostalgia. So if you want to be political (in a sexy way), may we suggest dressing up like Olivia Pope and President Fitzgerald Grant? This costume idea is also great for people who like the concept of partaking in Halloween but dont want to do anything too extreme. Were talking a nice, sharp suit for Fitz and a sexy-chic cream-colored set for Olivia with a fabulous coat and satchel, of course. H&M Brushed-Finish Tie-Belt Coat $75 $75 American Flag Lapel Pin $5 $5 Photo: Michael Ochs Archives/Getty Images When it comes to classic celebrity couples costumes, you cant go wrong with Sonny and Cher. Sure, their career as a duo didnt last forever, but their incredibly groovy style did. There are many iconic Sonny and Cher looks to choose from, or you can mix a bunch together. But as long as you have the jet-black wigs (and Sonnys stache), any pop-culture or music enthusiast should know exactly who you are and respect it. Sonny Wig and Mustache Costume $25 $25 Long Straight Cosplay Wig $15 $15 Photo: Paramount/Courtesy Everett Collection Consider yourselves the king and queen of Halloween? Then you cant get any spookier or more classic than The Addams Familys Morticia and Gomez. This is probably one of the most classic couples costumes famously worn by Joe Jonas and Sophie Turner in their wedded-bliss days. These looks are about makeup and attitude more so than the clothes. Morticia wears her long black dress, and Gomez wears his dark suit, but the ghoulish makeup is always a standout: dark eye shadow, deadly pale skin, and bold contouring. For the king and queen of Halloween, this is where you shine. $30 Gomez Pinstripe Suit Costume Set $45 View this post on Instagram A post shared by LilJupiter (@liljupiterr) The most unlikely of couples is now one of the best Halloween couples costumes. Lana del Rey and Jeremy Dufrene are not your average pair; the singer surprised us all when she married the Louisiana-based alligator-tour guide in an intimate bayou-adjacent ceremony at the start of the month. So whether you want to channel the couples wedding (at which Lana was said to wear a white dress shed found at a New Orleans vintage store) or the two lovers wearing headsets on an airboat, your looks are sure to earn appreciation from the pop-culture and Lana obsessed. post shared by NOVA (@iriptheslit) Sweat, baby, sweat. If youre obsessed with the Sweat Tour, whats more brat than channeling everyones favorite onstage duo, Charli XCX and Troye, a skinny tank and maybe some chaps, plus two handheld mics and getting ready to steal the spotlight. Poppy Lissiman Caidyn Shades $150 $150 Sweat Tour Troye and Charli XCX Shirt $15 Photo: Byron Cohen/FX Networks/Courtesy: Everett Collection The more modern comedic take on Morticia and Gomez Addams is vampire duo Nadja and Laszlo. The eternal bloodsucking pair always wear ornate outfits, mostly dating back to the old-world times when they died. But you can easily portray the pair in classic vampire garb and go all out with the hair, makeup, and accessories. Nadja loves her crazy wiglike hairstyles, her red lipstick, and carrying the miniature doll version of herself, while Laszlo is always in a three-piece suit with a coat or cloak and loves his witch-skin hat. Dont forget the fangs, of course. $32 Womens Witch / Vampire Dress $16 $16 Scarecrow Small Deluxe Custom Fangs $19 Photo: Anthony Neste/Getty Images The mob-wife trend may have come and gone, but The Sopranos are forever. Whether you want to channel the shows main characters, Tony and Carmela, or the doomed Christopher and Adriana, you and your partner can have fun with velour tracksuits, silk bowling shirts, lots of animal prints, and fake nails (accessorized with some diamond chains and maybe a tray of baked ziti). Then, bada-bing, bada-boom, youre set as one of TVs all-time most famous couples. Mens Velour 2-Piece Tracksuit

Costume and FashionScotland National Museum of CostumevteHalloween costumes are costumes worn on Halloween, typically while trick-or-treating (going door to door to ask for treats). Although traditionally based on frightening supernatural or folkloric beings, by the 1930s costumes based on characters from mass mediasuch as film, literature and radiogained popularity. Halloween costumes have traditionally been worn mainly by young people, but since the mid-20th century increasingly by adults as well. An early 20th-century Irish Halloween mask (a "rhymer" or "vizor"), displayed at the Museum of Country Life in Ireland. The custom of wearing Halloween costumes may have originated in a Celtic festival held on October 31 to mark the beginning of winter, at which costumes were worn to ward off evil spirits.[1][unreliable source?] Called Samhain in Ireland and Scotland and on the Isle of Man, but Calan Gaeaf in Wales, Cornwall, and Brittany, the festival is believed to have pre-Christian roots. After the Christianization of Ireland in Ireland and Scotland and Scotland and Ireland in Ireland in Ireland in Ireland in Ireland Irelan the 5th century, some of these customs may have been retained in the Christian observance of All Hallows' Eve in that region. Although the festival continued to be called Samhain and Calan Gaeaf, it blended ancient traditions with Christian ones.[2][3] The time of year was seen as liminal, when spirits or fairies (the Aos S) and the souls of the dead could more easily come to the world of the living, [4] It was also believed that the Aos S needed to be propitiated to ensure that the people and their livestock survived winter. From at least the 16th century, [5] the festival included mumming and guising, [6] which involved people going door to door in costume or disguise and usually reciting verses or songs in exchange for food.[6] Originally, this may have been a tradition in which people impersonated the Aos S or the souls of the dead and received offerings on their behalf. Impersonating these beings or wearing a disguise was also believed to protect oneself from them.[7] It has also been suggested that the mummers and guisers "personify the old spirits of the winter, who demanded reward in exchange for good fortune".[8] F. Marian McNeill suggests the ancient pagan festival included people wearing masks or costumes to represent the spirits, and that faces were marked or blackened with ashes from the sacred bonfire.[5] In parts of southern Ireland, a man dressed as a lir bhn or white mare led youths house to house reciting versessome with pagan overtonesin exchange for food. If the household gave food, it could expect good fortune, whereas not doing so would bring misfortune. [9] Similarly, in 19th-century England, youths went house to house with masked, painted, or blackened faces, often threatening to do mischief if they were not welcomed.[6] In parts of Wales, men went about dressed as fearsome beings called gwrachod,[6] while in some places, young people cross-dressed.[6] Although mumming and costumes were part of other yearly festivals elsewhere in Europe, in Celtic-speaking regions, they were "particularly appropriate to a night upon which supernatural beings were said to be abroad and could be imitated or warded off by human wanderers", [6]It has also been suggested that the wearing of Halloween costumes developed from the custom of souling, which was practiced by Christians in parts of Western Europe from at least the 15th century, [10][11] At Allhallowtide, groups of poor people would go house to house, collecting soul cakeseither as representatives of the dead[12] or in return for praying for them.[13] The Christian tradition of acknowledging the danse macabre is also suggested as the origin of dressing up on Halloween.[14][15][16][17]One 19th-century English writer said that Allhallowtide "used to consist of parties of children, dressed up in fantastic costume, who went round to the farmhouses and cottages, singing a song, and begging for cakes (spoken of as 'soul-cakes'), apples, money, or anything that the good wives would give them".[18] The soulers typically asked for "mercy on all Christian souls for a soul cake".[19] Shakespeare mentioned the practice in his play The Two Gentlemen of Verona (1593).[20][21] Christian minister Prince Sorie Conteh wrote on the wearing of costumes: "It was traditionally believed that the souls of the departed wandered the earth until All Saints' Day, and All Hallows' Eve provided one last chance for the dead to gain vengeance on their enemies before moving to the next world. To avoid being recognized by any soul that might be seeking such vengeance, people would don masks or costumes to disguise their identities".[22] In the Middle Ages, statues and relics of martyred saints were paraded through the streets at Allhallowtide. Some churches that could not afford these things had people dress as saints instead.[23][24]
Some believers continue the practice of dressing as saints, biblical figures, and reformers in Halloween, "the dead of the churchyards rose for one wild, hideous carnival," known as the danse macabre, which has often been depicted in church decoration.[26] An article published by Christianity Today claimed the danse macabre was enacted at village pageants and court masques, with people "dressing up as corpses from various strata of society" and suggested this was the origin of Halloween costume parties.[27][28]Facial makeup as masquerade is popular on Halloween, often referring to horror archetypes or various characters from movies or TV showsThe custom of guising at Halloween in North America was first recorded in 1911, when a newspaper in Kingston, Ontario reported children going "guising" around the neighborhood. [29] In 19th century America, Halloween was often celebrated with costume parades and
"licentious revelries."[30] However, efforts were made to "domesticate" the festival to conform with Victorian-era morality were de-emphasized, and only children were expected to celebrate the festival.[31] Early Halloween costumes emphasized the gothic nature of Halloween and were aimed primarily at children. Costumes were also made at home or using items (such as make-up) that could be purchased and utilized to create a costume. In the 1930s, A. S. Fishbach, Ben Cooper, and other firms began mass-producing Halloween costumes for sale in stores as trick-or-treating became popular in North America. Halloween costumes are often designed to imitate supernatural and scary beings. Costumes are traditionally those of monsters such as vampires, werewolves, zombies, ghosts, [32] skeletons, witches, goblins, trolls, devils, etc. In more recent years, such science fiction-inspired characters include aliens and superheroes. There are also costumes of pop culture figures like presidents, athletes, celebrities, or characters in film, television, literature, etc. Young girls often dress as entirely non-scary characters for Halloween costumes are not pop culture figures. (May 2025)In a National Retail Federation (NRF) study in the United States, it was found that 53.3% of consumers planned to buy a Halloween costume in 2005, spending $38.11 on average, up $10 from the year before. They were also expected to spend $4.96 billion in 2006, up significantly from just $3.3 billion the previous year.[34] But the troubled economy caused many Americans to cut back on Halloween spending, and in 2009, the NRF anticipated that American households would decrease Halloween spending by as much as 15% to $56.31.[35] In 2013, Americans spent on adult costumes (with more spent on adult costumes than for children's costumes) and $330 million on pet costumes.[36][37] In 2017, it was estimated that Americans would spend $9.1 billion on Halloween merchandise, with $3.4 billion of that towards costumes, spending $3.2 billion in 2019.[39] It was estimated that the Halloween spending in 2022 would reach $10.6 billion.[40]Halloween costumes in the contemporary Western world sometimes depict people and things from present times and are sometimes read in terms of their political and cultural significance. When costumes uncritically use stereotypical representations of other groups of people such as gypsies and Native Americans, they are sometimes denounced for cultural appropriation.[41][42][43] For example, Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) Secretary Julie Myers was involved in a scandal in 2008 at ICE's Halloween party when she made the Best Costume award to someone dressed as an "escaped Jamaican prisoner" with dreadlocks and blackface. [44] Woman dressed up for Halloween Halloween costumes can also generate controversy through overt sexualization of many women's costumes, [45] despite a surprisingly long history of it, [46][47][48] and even those intended for young girls. Costumes for women in those fields, and focus on sexualization of the wearer and often the concept

Halloween costume is that of the ghost. This is likely because ... when Hallows' and All Souls' Day would have emphasized visitations from the spirit world over the motifs of spirites and fairies. ... The baking and allowing them to go door to door to collect them in exchange for praying for the dead (a practice called souling), often carrying lanterns made of hollowed-out turnips. Around the 16th century, the practice called guising) to ask for food began and was often accompanied by recitation of traditional verses (a practice called mumming). Wearing costumes, another tradition, has many possible explanations, such as confusing the spirits or souls who visited earth or rose from local graveyards to engage in what was called a Danse Macabre, basically a large party among the dead. But you don't have to be expecting to wear this ultra-adorable (and warm!) getup. For the ladybug, cut a red poncho up the middle, curving the cut-out at the bottom to make the wings. Cut black spots out of foam paper to hot glue on each side. Then, paint two foam balls black, attaching one to each end of a pipe cleaner. Attach to a headband. For the daddy long legs costume, attach three giant pipe cleaners to each side of an umbrella. Cut out white and black circles out of foam paper to make eyes. Attach to the bottom of the umbrella using hot glue. Cut two triangles for fangs and attach to the bottom of the umbrella. SHOP RED PONCHOSHOP BLACK UMBRELLASHOP FOAM PAPERMike Garten/Good HousekeepingWine and cheese are musts during date night, so why not bring your favorite things to Halloween? A little crafting is required, but there's no arguing with the adorable results. Create the wedge and wheel of Gouda with a Styrofoam cake round. Decorate the cake round with yellow and red craft paint, cut out a 1/4-sized wedge as a prop and secure the rest of it onto a headband. For the grape headband, you'll need purple holiday ornaments together and twist the ends together and twist the ends together and twist the ends together and twist the wires together to create a tapered bunch of grapes and trim any excess wire pieces. Wrap any exposed wire with floral tape. Cut a leaf shape from green paper and attach it to the bunch to secure onto your head.
