Our goal is to help students develop a comprehensive understanding of music, regardless of their age or skill level. We're located next to world-class recording studios, rehearsal rooms, a radio station, music store, and other industry professionals' workspaces. At the Lakehouse Music Academy, we've put together a team of experienced teachers with diverse teaching styles and expertise in various instruments. Our aim is to create an inclusive environment where musicians from all backgrounds can feel at home. Our students will have access to private lessons, group rehearsals, and performances at top music venues in Asbury Park. They'll also learn about essential aspects of modern music production like recording, engineering, songwriting, and business/marketing. We use online tools like electronic practice logs and videotaped lessons to keep our students engaged. The Lakehouse Music Academy is based in the Lakehouse Music Building, which houses two top-notch recording studios, a retail store, rehearsal rooms, and many industry professionals' workspaces. Our mission is to enrich our students' lives by providing access to lifelong music education. We value creativity, diversity, community, and the power of music to improve people's lives. During the pandemic, when schools shifted to virtual learning, the thriving Lakehouse Music Academy adapted by creating their own weekly TV show. This live YouTube broadcast features a variety of talent from all ages, including adorable pre-teens rocking out to hard rock classics, parents getting back together with old friends again. Instructors offer tips and advice on playing and performing just like they do in their in-person lessons. There are also special appearances by touring artists. Lakehouse Music Academy celebrates 10 years of real-life music education with unforgettable events, including a first block party on Lake Avenue in downtown Asbury Park. Atkins will be returning to her hometown for some time and performing short pre-taped segments on Twitch. The academy's teaching staff includes virtuoso guitarists such as Ray Suhny and PK Lavengood. Lakehouse Music Academy Announces its 10th Year with a Record-Breaking Big Gig In 2013, Lakehouse Music Academy welcomed its first students, expanding to over 1,000 students today. The academy has grown exponentially since then and now offers music programs at two locations: its original campus in Asbury Park and the recently opened Red Bank facility. The Get Started program is designed for young children aged 6-10 who learn to play instruments in weekly group rehearsals accompanied by one-on-one private lessons with their choice of instructor. The core students aged 10-18 take the stage at The Big Gig, a showcase that has grown from a simple weekend event to an expansive 5-day festival featuring over eighty student bands across two venues. This year's Big Gig is expected to be the largest yet, with Lakehouse Music Academy marking its tenth anniversary in style. The academy's partnerships with the Count Basie Center for the Arts and the Asbury Park Music Foundation have enabled it to provide inclusive music programs and scholarships to local children. Through its on-site instruction and off-site classes, LhMA has reached schools across Asbury Park, including several notable institutions. Lakehouse students have gone on to achieve success in various fields, including music, audio engineering, YouTube content creation, and the entertainment industry. Many graduates are currently pursuing their musical dreams at renowned programs like Berklee College of Music and Rutgers University. Industry legends such as Wyclef Jean, Jay and Max Weinberg, Bon Jovi, and Bruce Springsteen have performed with and taught Lakehouse students. Speaking on the academy's growth, founder Leidersdorff says, "I'm thrilled it's been 10 years. We're just getting started."
