 challenge themselves and really use the depths of their brains to figure out the answer(s). Hard Mythology Riddle There is a mythological story of a Sphinx, a monster with the body of a lion and the head of a woman. Apparently, the Sphinx sat on top of a rock along the road to the city of Thebes, stopping travelers and proposing to them a riddle. The Sphinx claimed that whoever failed the riddle would be killed, and evidently, not pass through to the city. This is the riddle:What animal walks on four legs in the morning, two legs during the day, and three legs in the evening?Oedipus, the king of Thebes, figured out the answer to this logic puzzle:Man, who in childhood creeps on hands and knees, in manhood walks erect, and in old age with the aid of a staff. (Morning, day, and night are representative of the stages of life.) Buried Treasure RiddleThe best way to find the right answer to this brainteaser is through logic and deductive reasoning. After a storm tears through the Hex Archipelago, you find five grizzled survivors in the water. Shivering their timbers, they explain that theyre the former crew of the great pirate Greenbeard, who marooned them out to sea. In gratitude for saving them, they reveal a secret: the island they were on is also where Greenbeard has buried his treasure hoard. But when the sailors try to describe the island, something seems off. All agree it was flat and barren with no prominent features except for some trees. Yet each pirate claims they saw a different number of trees, ranging from two to six. The pirate who saw two trees says the treasure was buried right at his feet. When you fly your hot air balloon over the area to investigate, you see hundreds of small islands, each with exactly six trees. The next storm will be here soon, so youll have to hurry and narrow your search. What does the islands have exactly 6 trees of equal height. The islands are all flat, have no obstructions other than trees and their precise shapes arent important. Each pirate was confined in a specific spot and saw a different number of trees, ranging from 2 to 6. They could look all around but not move. The treasure was buried at the feet of the pirate who saw 2 trees. Answer: No, the pirates arent delirious from dehydration. Remember, each was confined to a separate point on the island, and no two of them could see the same number of trees. That means that for all but one pirate, something was blocking their view. And since there are no other features on the island, that something could only have been other trees. A pirate would see fewer trees when two or more fell along a straight line from their vantage point. So we need to find the island where five different pirates standing in different pirates standing in different pirates standing in different pirates standing in different pirates. And on most islands there a position where 5 trees can be seen by standing in different pirates standing in different pirates.
line with two of them. It turns out that the hardest locations to find are those with fewer visible trees precisely because they require more trees to line up with the viewers position. So how can we see just two trees. One way would be if all the trees were lined up in single file, such as on this island. Then, you could stand at the end of the line and see on this island and dig up a chest containing a massive pile of tree seeds. Prisoner Hat RiddleHeres a great mind-boggling riddle:100 prisoners cannot see the color of the hat on their own head, but they can see the colors of all the hats in front of them.

The prisoner in the back can clearly see all 99 hats in front of him. The 50th prisoner in line can see the 49 hats in front of him, and the prisoner in the forest before him. Also, the prisoner in the front of him, and the prisoner in the front of him, and the prisoner in the forest before him. Also, the prisoner in the front of him, and the prisoner in the front of him, and the prisoner in the forest before him.
that adds to 100.A guard is going to walk down the line, starting in the back, and ask each prisoner what color hat they answer incorrectly, they will be set free. Each prisoner can hear all of the other prisoners responses as well as any gunshots that indicate an incorrect response. They can remember all of this information. Before the executions begin, the prisoners come up with the following plan: If the first prisoner to speakthe one in the back of the linesees an even number of blue hats, he will yell out blue. If he sees an odd number of blue hats, he will yell out blue, indicating that he sees an odd number of blue hats, he knows his hat must be blue to make the number even. Similarly, if he sees an even number of blue hats, he knows his hat must be red to keep it that way. The same logic works if the first prisoner behind him and takes that information into consideration. If he sees an even number of blue hats and the prisoner behind him yells blue, making the total number of blue hats would be odd (of the 99 seen by make the total number odd (not counting the very first prisoner). The very first prisoner is the maybe-martyr of the group that has nothing to do with the hat on his own head, which he cannot know, and so his chances of living are only 50%. More Riddles Hard riddles like these are a fun and
