There are many arguments in favour of banning cars from city centres. 2. However, a city centre without traffic does have its disadvantages. 3. For one thing, there are far too many cars on the roads. b) Now add supporting details to each paragraph. Paragraph 1: There are many arguments in favour of banning cars from city centres. Air pollution from vehicle emissions would be greatly reduced if cars were prohibited from driving in city centres. Pedestrians and cyclists would also feel much safer sharing the streets without worrying about traffic. Noise pollution would decline as well without the constant honking of horns and revving of engines.Akhtamov a.a. destination b2 test collectionAkhtamov a.a. destination b2 test collectionKamila JumamuratovaThis document contains a grammar and vocabulary test with multiple choice questions.
