These metals will perfectly match your color type and give your look elegance and freshness.Neutral undertone. If it's difficult to determine the color of your veins, or if you can clearly see both green and blue vessels on your wrist, it means that you will look equally good in silver and gold, as you have a neutral undertone. You need to decide if you should wear gold or silver based on your skin tone. If you have a cool skin undertone, you should wear silver. But gold jewelry is a better choice if your undertone is warm. Neutral skins can wear both metals, though. Cool Skin Tone Should Wear Silver Warm Skin Tone Should Wear Gold Neutral Skin Tone Can Wear Both Different Ways of Deciding What Color Jewelry to Wear Picking the right jewelry could be pretty confusing—especially when you cannot decide what you should wear today. But there are several methods or techniques, if you will, that can assist you in choosing the perfect accessory for your outfit. (See below). Choosing it based on your skin tone. If you'd ask a professional stylist, "Should i wear gold or silver?" they'd definitely want to know your skin undertone in advance. It's because most fashion gurus believe that you should choose colors that match your natural hues. So, if you already know if you're a cool, warm, or neutral person, it's easy to select the proper jewelry pieces. Considering your aesthetic and style. You may want to ask yourself, "What's my aesthetic?" before thinking about the accessories to wear. A smart way of deciding between silver and gold is by analyzing your outfits and overall preferences. If your wardrobe consists of mostly warm tones, you are probably off without silver-ish or steel-ish jewelry. But if the opposite is true and you have many cool-colored pieces, then gold might not be your thing. AND if you own a collection of all tones, you may enjoy both metals equally. Going with the trends. Is gold or silver more popular in 2022? Looking into the trends, gold seems to be preferred by more stylists and fashion bloggers. But silver has always been a precious metal in fashion regardless of the vogues. Those who ask themselves, "Should I wear gold or silver?" can make up their mind by looking up the current trends. It might not lead to a choice that fully matches your skin and style. But it can definitely keep you in the game and help you seem trendy. Thinking about the healing properties. An uncommon way of deciding between gold or silver jewelry is by considering their so-called healing powers. Some believe that gold can cure several skin problems and lend a hand opening your chakras—if you're into such stuff. Plus, silver has proved to be an excellent antibacterial metal, and many suggest that it can accelerate the recovery of your wounds. Take an Online Quiz to Find the Perfect Jewelry We have created a fashionista-level quiz for anyone who asks, "should i wear gold or silver?" It's a unisex test that can help all genders discover what jewelry pieces match their skin and style. All you need to do is answer 20 simple questions about yourself. You're guaranteed to receive 100% accurate results instantly. How to Know if You Have Gold or Silver Skin Tone? Okay, you already know that the best way of picking the right accessory is by matching it to your undertone. But what if you don't know if you're warm, cool, or neutral? No need to panic. It's pretty simple to discover your tone. Here are two efficient methods to doing so. Method #1: Whiteness Test Under sunlight, hold a piece of white paper next to your skin and observe the tone difference. If your skin is nearly as white as the paper, you have a cool skin tone. You have a warm undertone if your skin looks yellowish or red-ish compared to the paper. If none is true about your hue, you're neutral and don't even need to worry about wearing gold or silver—because both suit you. Method #2: Vein Test Next time someone asks, "Should I wear gold or silver?" look at their wrist veins. If you see greenish veins, offer them to wear gold because their undertone is warm. However, if their veins are pinkish or blue, they might wear silver because their tone is cooler. And if none of the said colors matched the person's veins, they're neutral and can wear almost any metal. It Shouldn't Be All About Gold and Silver. It's not the smartest way of picking yourself the right pieces of jewelry by asking questions like, "should i wear gold or silver?" You can find so many other options, such as rose gold and stainless steel, out there. Base metal, platinum, and even titanium are proper choices for a fashionista like you. The good thing about our quiz is that it considers all top metals to achieve accurate results. So, if the options you have sound confusing, sit back and let us do the hard work for you. We can determine which one suits you by analyzing your skin, style, and physical features, as well as your preferences. By: Ana Rinkevich Continue Jewelry can completely transform an outfit, add polish to your look, and reflect your personality. But if you've ever wondered which metal—gold or silver—suits you best, this quiz is here to help you decide. While both gold and silver are classic choices, each one offers a unique vibe and can enhance your natural beauty in different ways. Choosing between these metals isn't just about preference; factors like your skin tone, personal style, and lifestyle can all play a role in determining your ideal choice.One of the most important aspects in the gold vs. silver debate is skin tone. While there are no strict rules, traditionally, warmer skin tones look radiant with gold, as it complements the yellow or olive undertones. Silver, on the other hand, is thought to beautifully enhance cooler skin tones, bringing out pink or blue undertones. But it's not always that simple; you might have a neutral skin tone or prefer one metal over the other for how it feels or looks on you.Another element to consider is personal style. Gold often brings a sense of warmth and luxury, lending itself well to classic, boho, or retro-inspired looks. Silver, meanwhile, has a cooler, more modern vibe, making it a go-to choice for minimalist, edgy, or futuristic styles. Beyond that, your daily lifestyle might also guide your choice. For example, gold jewelry is generally more durable and can handle frequent wear without tarnishing, while silver can be more affordable and versatile for everyday accessorizing.As you take this quiz, think about what jewelry makes you feel confident, what complements your wardrobe, and how your lifestyle affects your accessory choices. Whether you're drawn to the warmth of gold or the coolness of silver, this quiz will give you insight into the metal that aligns with your unique features and style.
