Under the leadership of Dr. Edward Rynearson, principal of the Fifth Avenue School, Pittsburgh, Pa., the original Alpha Chapter at the Fifth Avenue School to more than 1,000 chapters by 1930. Equipped with a constitution, an emblem and motto, and a group of dedicated principals as coordinators, the new NHS organization quickly developed into one of the country's leading educational groups. • In 1929, the NASSP turned its attention to middle level schools and expanded the scope of its concern for recognizing outstanding students by establishing the National Junior Honor Society (NJHS). With its own constitution and handbook, NJHS has established criteria that parallel the emphases found in the NHS with an added purpose to encourage citizenship. What is the National Honor Society (NHS) is the nation's premier organization established to recognize outstanding high school students. More than just an honor roll student, NHS serves to honor those students who have demonstrated excellence in the areas of Scholarship, Leadership, Service, and Character. These characteristics have been associated with membership in the organization since their beginnings in 1921 and 1929. • Today, it is estimated that more than one million students participate in activities of the NHS. NHS chapters are found in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, many U.S. Territories, and Canada. Chapter membership not only recognizes students for their accomplishments, but challenges them to develop further through active involvement in school activities and community service. Who can join the National Honors Society? • National Honor Society (NHS) is more than just an honor roll. Each Honor Society chapter establishes rules for membership, and Character. • Students in grades 10 through 12 in a school with both an official charter of the National Honor Society and an active affiliation with the national office are eligible for consideration for membership in NHS. • Students interested in becoming a member of the Honor Society should check with the chapter (school) level. In schools that have a chapter, interested students can find out from the chapter adviser when they become eligible for membership (what grade level), and what the criteria should exist in a published document that outlines the school's selection process. The selection process recommended by the national office includes the completion of an information sheet submitted to the adviser by all students who are identified by their academic performance as being eligible, or "candidates" for membership in the local chapter at a special induction ceremony. High-achieving students often look for ways to stand out in their academic and professional journeys. One opportunity that combines recognition and growth is through honor societies. Honor societies are organizations that recognize and reward academic excellence, leadership, and other achievements. For those passionate about business, the National Business Honor Society (NBHS) provides a platform to acknowledge excellence and cultivate leadership among high school students. What is the National Business Honor Society? The NBHS is a recognition program designed for high school students who excel in business education. It is a prestigious honor society that highlights academic achievement and leadership in business studies. The society acknowledges students' accomplishments and also encourages the development of future business leaders as it opportunities for networking, skill enhancement, and more. Chapters are typically established within schools, and membership is based on both academic performance and a demonstrated interest in business-related fields. The History and Mission of the National Business Honor Society (NBHS), founded by the National Business Education Association (NBEA), is all about promoting business studies while encouraging its members to strive for academic excellence, leadership, and service. The society's mission is to shape the next generation of business leaders by promotiong a commitment to education, ethical business practices, and community service. NBHS recognizes students' academic achievements and emphasizes the importance of character and leadership in business. Through its activities and programs, the society aims to inspire members to continue their education in business and pursue impactful careers. NBHS plays an important role in the personal and professional growth of its student members, setting them up for success in the business world. Leadership and Service: Core Values of NBHS Leadership and service are at the heart of the National Business Honor Society. These core values shape the organization's mission and activities which members toward excellence both inside and outside the classroom. Leadership in NBHS is about more than just holding a title or position. Members are encouraged to take initiative, lead by example, and inspire their peers. This leadership is cultivated through various activities, such as organizing events, leading business projects, and participating in chapter meetings. The NBHS prepares its members to take on future roles in business and community settings, where they can drive positive change and innovation. Service is as equally important in the NBHS framework. Members are expected to participate in service projects that benefit their schools and communities. This could involve mentoring younger students, participating in community outreach programs, or helping to organize charity events. Through these activities, members are able to give back to their communities and develop a sense of social responsibility, which is essential for ethical leadership in the business world.
Together, these values of leadership and service create a well-rounded experience for NBHS members, preparing them to be both successful professionals and conscientious citizens. How Do I Apply for membership? To apply for membership in the National Business Honor Society, you need to follow a few specific steps. First, ensure that you meet the academic National Honor Society requirements, including a strong GPA in both your overall studies and business courses. Course Requirements Complete a minimum of four business-related classes. At least two of these should be AP, dual enrollment, or college-level courses. Maintain a strong GPA, usually at least 3.5, in both overall academics and business courses (may vary slightly by chapter). Eligibility Membership is typically open to high school juniors and seniors. Leadership and Involvement participate in leadership roles within your school or community. Involvement participate in leadership and Involvement participate in leadership and Involvement participate in leadership roles within your school or community.
Additional Criteria Some chapters may require faculty recommendations or a specific number of volunteer hours. Once eligibility is confirmed, apply through your school's NBHS chapter. The application process may include submitting transcripts and obtaining faculty recommendations. What Are the Benefits of Being a Member? Joining the National Business Honor Society (NBHS) comes with several perks that are more than just academic recognition. As a member, you'll connect with others who share your passion for business, helping you build valuable professional connections early on. Plus, you'll have access to scholarships and grants, which can help with your education costs. NBHS also offers plenty of chances to develop your leadership and community service projects. These experiences will look great on your resume and also prepare you for future leadership roles in business. Being recognized for your academic achievements in NBHS can be a big plus when you're applying to colleges or starting your career. What Activities Does the National Business Honor Society Offer? As a member of the NBHS, you'll have access to a variety of activities that enhance your understanding of business and leadership while allowing you to contribute meaningfully to your community. The specific activities offered often vary by chapter but generally include: Leadership Development Programs Many chapters offer workshops, seminars, and conferences aimed at developing leadership besides to the community. Members participate in or organize service projects that benefit local communities and build a sense of social responsibility. These projects include financial literacy workshops, fundraising for local charities, or mentorship programs for younger students. Competitive Events Some chapters are affiliated with organizations like Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA), which allows National Business Honor Society members to participate in business competitions. These events can range from case studies and presentations to debates on current business issues, providing a platform to apply and test your business knowledge. Networking Opportunities Regular meetings and special events, such as business luncheons or industry tours, are organized to help members connect with peers and broide a chance to learn from others' experiences and build a network that can be valuable in future career endeavors. Recognition and Awards NBHS often organizes ceremonies to honor members for their achievements in business education. This includes annual awards, scholarships, and even opportunities to be recognized at state and national conferences. These activities are designed to build both academic and practical business skills while fostering a strong sense of community and leadership among members. How Do I Maintain My Membership? Maintaining your membership requires an ongoing commitment to both your academic and extracurricular responsibilities. To remain in good standing, you must continue to meet the GPA requirements—typically maintaining at least a 3.5 GPA in your business courses and a 3.0 overall GPA. Beyond academics, you need to stay actively involved by attending regular chapter meetings and participating in National Business Honor Society events. You must also fulfil the community service hours each year, some of which must be associated with NBHS-sponsored activities. Failure to meet these obligations can result in your membership being revoked. It's important to keep track of your participation and service hours throughout the year to ensure you meet all criteria. How Can Schools Start a Chapter? To start a chapter at your school, you'll need to follow a structured process. Step 1. Gain Approval Seek approval from your school administration to establish a National Business Honor Society chapter. Step 2. Submit Charter Application to the National Business Education Association (NBEA). Outline your chapter's goals and explain how it will support business education at your school. Step 3. Receive Official Materials Once your application is approved, you'll receive official materials to help launch and promote your chapter. What Sets the NBHS Apart from Other Honor Societies is its focus on business education and leadership at the high school level. While many honor societies recognize overall academic achievement, NBHS specifically honors students who excel in business, finance, and entrepreneurship. NBHS isn't just about academics; it's also about developing leadership skills and giving back to the community. Members are expected to maintain high grades in their business courses and take on active roles in leadership and service projects. This well-rounded approach helps prepare students for future challenges in the business world. Plus, NBHS offers networking and mentorship opportunities that are not present in other honor societies. This well-rounded approach helps prepare students for future challenges in the business world.

Being part of an honor society enhances college applications and resumes, demonstrating commitment to excellence and leadership. NBHS membership allows students to connect with peers who share a dedication to academics and leadership, leading to collaborations and relationships beyond high school. Comparing NBHS with other Business-Related Student Organizations, it's important to understand how each serves a specific role in business education and leadership among students. NBHS focuses primarily on recognizing academic excellence in business education at the high school level. NBHS is distinct in its focus on academic honor, making it a prestigious addition to a student's resume. On the other hand, organizations like DECA (Distributive Education Clubs of America) and FBLA (Future Business Leaders of America) cater to a broader audience, offering students opportunities to engage in competitive events, leadership conferences, and skill-building activities across various aspects of business and entrepreneurship. DECA, for instance, is known for its focus on preparing students for careers in marketing, finance, hospitality, and management through real-world experiences and competitions. Similarly, FBLA offers different events that cover different business-related topics, allowing students to gain practical skills that are directly applicable to their future careers. BPA (Business Professionals of America) also plays a significant role, particularly in providing students with leadership development and professional growth opportunities through its Workplace Skills Assessment Program. BPA is broader in its scope, offering competitions and events that span over 90 categories in business-related fields, such as finance, accounting, and management. Beta Gamma Sigma (BGS), while similar to NBHS in its focus on academic excellence, is an international honor society that specifically recognizes the top-performing students in business programs at AACSB-accredited schools. Membership in BGS is highly prestigious and is based on students in business programs at AACSB-accredited schools.
National Business Honor Society focuses on academic recognition and leadership in high school business education, while DECA, FBLA, and BPA offer practical experience and competition. Beta Gamma Sigma recognizes top academic achievers in collegiate business programs. Each organization contributes uniquely to developing future business leaders. WHAT WE DO We are a highly collaborative community of scientists working to generate a comprehensive understanding of living systems through multidisciplinary interactions. Requirements are as follows: Student must be in their junior or senior year Must have taken at least 3 courses (or is completing their third), who maintains a minimum 3.5 GPA with a minimum overall academic GPA of 3.0 (in a 4.0 scale) Each chapter may also customize their requirements with a higher GPA and leadership requirements. Students inducted into the NBHS happily record this honor on their work, college, and scholarship applications. The National Business Education Association (NBEA) is the sponsor for the NBHS. There is a history, which I will briefly relate. The information is drawn from Business Education Association. After years of success and many high school chapters nationally, this honor society was disbanded in the mid-1990's. A few existing chapters tried to sustain their honor societies at the local level. Without sponsorship from a professional national organization, these chapters tried to sustain their honor societies at the local level. Without sponsorship from a professional national organization, these chapters lost their national affiliation. In 2006, the NBEA Executive Board established the NBHS task force. In 2009, the NBHS was launched, and the rest is history! A National Governing Council, made up of volunteers from all over the Country, is a dedicated business education professionals (The National Business Honor Society...Academic Recognition for Your Business Students!). While my role in the Governing Council is officially over, my love for the NBHS is as strong as ever. NBHS Chapters have grown nationally to 180 chapters were being evaluated during the Fall meeting of the Governing Council. Massachusetts proudly has 16 active chapters (as of summer, 2017). Quincy High School was the first Massachusetts Chapter! We definitely should have more, but this shows positive forward progress in business education for Massachusetts! We as business education for Massachusetts! We as business education for Massachusetts when budgets and staffing cuts hit our areas. We have to show the community there is value in business education courses. The fight right now centers around a financial literacy requirement. Involvement in the professional organizations is critical. Massachusetts Business Education Association (MBEA) is having our annual State conference on April 6, 2018. The National Business Education Association Conference (NBEA) will be in Maryland this year from March 27-31, 2018. Students able to graduate with the National Business Education Honor Society (NBHS) cord shows the community the prestige and value in what the student accomplishes, and what we business educators teach. Regardless of the student's future plans, participation in the NBHS is a prestigious honor.
It shows the world the student is ready for life. Public, Independent, and private schools offering a business education curriculum following NBEA National Business Standards may apply for a chapter charter. There are strict requirements, which are details in the "start-up kit" located at • It is important to note that this is a template document.
The applying schools should customize and follow editing and instructions for signatures and supplemental, supporting documentation. Please do not let fear of forms stop you from pursuing an NBHS Chapter Charter. I am happy to assist if you want to be in touch with me. NBHS-Brochure About the blogger: Lydia Ann Nelson is an experienced accountant and business manager who currently is a certified business and technology educator. She teaches at Whitman, MA, and is also an adjunct faculty member of Quincy College in Plymouth. Her passion is to enable her students to be life ready with the financial literacy, business and technology tools for a successful future. Because of this, she has served as the Governing Council Chair for the National Business Education Association Executive Board. Additionally, Lydia is a K-16 task force and steering committee member for the financial advocacy collaborative, MassSAVES. Lydia is a reader of historical fiction, crafter, cook and baker. She lives in Carver with her husband and two adopted cats. She also has two grown children. The primary purpose of the Business Honor Society is to recognize those students who have demonstrated outstanding achievement in a secondary business program. Eligibility:
Juniors and Seniors who have completed or are currently enrolled in their third full-year Business course (a full-year course measures as 2 semesters and a half-year course measures as 2 semesters and a half-year course measures as 2 semesters and a half-year course measures as 1 semester).

Students will be required to attend all scheduled meetings with the exception of one excused absence (see meeting schedule below). Maintain a 3.67 GPA for business courses and 3.0 overall GPA for all subsequent years of membership. Students must demonstrate and continue to maintain appropriate standards of conduct that would be expected from an Honor Society member. Please note, Junior members must reapply for continued membership in their Senior year and complete only parts 2 and 3 of the application (An essay is not requirements for maintaining your membership will be monitored. If requirements are not being met you will be dismissed from the society and your membership terminated. Application, Selection, and Recognition Process: Business Honor Society advisor(s) verify eligibility and select students. A list of potential members will be distributed to all business staff for review. Students may be denied if any one of the criteria is not met. Selected students are required to pay $10 annual dues ($5 for renewal membership) Selected students will be honored at an induction ceremony (Mandatory attendance to be a full member). Business Department completes certificates, prepares and sends a congratulatory letter to each student with an additional copy sent to the school guidance department, and registers the membership with the National Business Education Association. Honorees will be awarded National Business Honor Society pins at the year-end meeting, after completion of the community service hour requirement. Member Community Service Project:
