My educational resources for teachers are creative, practical, innovative, and classroom-tested for middle and high school English, Yearbook/Journalism, and more! My education includes a Bachelor's Degree in Secondary Education with a minor in English, a Master's Degree in English, and an Educational Specialist Degree in Instructional Leadership. I also have a Principal Licensure. With those degrees, I have been fortunate enough to serve since 2004 in education in the state of Tennessee. Throughout those years, I taught English at the middle school, high school, and college levels. For over a decade, I was the yearbook sponsor as well. Those years have been served in rural and suburban settings as well as with students in on-grade level, honors, and inclusion courses, which has given me a unique perspective on students' learning styles as well as an appreciation for how much of a role a student's background plays in the educational process. Beyond the classroom, I have served on the state textbook committee, EOC test-writing committees, state writing assessment, and national AP Literature and Language assessment scoring panels, as well as being a Common Core trainer during that phase of Tennessee's educational history. I feel all these opportunities strengthened my teaching strategies and ability to manage multiple pieces of various projects.
